

Democrats are Poor Losers

by

Phil Rasmussen

We've had four long years of watching our country get transformed into a social justice experiment under Biden's leadership (and I use that term loosely). Fortunately most Americans saw through this destructive leadership that brought our nation almost to the brink of destruction and extinction.

During his presidential candidacy and election to President, Trump made it clear that he was going to reform the government. His campaign stressed economic stability, secured borders, reduction of government waste, and many other reforms causing Democrats to foam at the mouth like rabid dogs. Overwhelmingly, Americans made their feelings known through both their electoral and popular votes for Trump, and for both the Senate and House of Representatives.

While there is no doubt that America gave a mandate to Trump, to clean up the governance of the United States and put the nation back on track that our founding fathers established.

The return of Trump as president has crazed, fanatical, and intolerant Democrat bureaucrats running scared. And, honestly, I'm glad for it. The Democrats should be scared for they have abandoned not only their initial ideology, but also the American public by embracing the tenants of socialism and communism.

They are so scared to losing out completely that they are fighting to retain their political, economic, and social status that they have gone berserk and are fighting against the desires of their constituents. Democrats seem to be incapable of acknowledging their mistake of embracing far-left progressive policies. This is hurting them in all sectors of politics, the economy, and our society. They would be far better off listening and responding to their constituents in an honest, open, and productive manner, rather than trying to fight against the country's wishes.

Democrat senators and representatives, alike, need to stop their road blocking antics which is time-wasting, costly, and keeps our government from fully functioning. This does not mean that they cannot question and debate, but rather to work together with their counterparts to create a well oiled, functioning government in an expeditious manner.

Democrat governors, mayors, and legislatures need to let loose of their false creations for sanctuary, refuge, or asylum cities and states, and address the real needs for American citizens and not illegal aliens. They need to eliminate social programs that benefit selected classes of people and not others.

They also need to stop trying to lead the people through the use of false and incomplete narratives, misdirection, scare tactics, and political revolution.

Democrats would be well-served by looking back on their American Superhero – Superman and his mantra:

“Truth, Justice and The American Way”
Superman, DC Comics